Davis Talks for Smith and Self

Preparing for Second Dash to West —Boasts of Coming Democratic Victory—Continues to Attack Republicans.

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Albany, Oct. 8.—Swinging westward across the Empire State, John W. Davis today wielded a two-bladed political sword in a drive linking his own campaign fortunes in New York to those of Governor Al Smith.

The Democratic presidential nominee devoted one blade to attacks upon the Republican national administration but with the other he trumpeted for the re-election of Governor Smith. The governor meanwhile returned the compliment by campaigning for Davis in New England.

"The chief executive of New York," Davis told a delegation that boarded the train in Syracuse, "is fighting the battles of Democracy on another front. He is speaking in the name of the Democratic party in New England and will return shortly to New York to receive a new commission from the people of his state for another two years as governor."

"As a lately adopted citizen of New York, I am glad to pledge my personal allegiance to Al Smith."

Leaving Syracuse, where he spent the night after an address, Davis was to speak in Rochester at noon and to conclude his first tour of the Empire State with a speech tonight in Buffalo. He will return to New York City then to leave Friday on a second dash into the west. This tour, it was announced, will only go as far as St. Louis.

Thus far in his New York drive, Davis has stressed three big issues, aside from the "record of the Republican administration." These were the nations foreign policy, an appeal for labor's support and repeated attacks upon the tariff. He sounded everywhere a boast of coming Democratic victory, frequently exhorting Democratic workers to "go out and win—it will be a certain victory."

Zeppelin Fit for Atlantic Flight

High Cross Winds Prevent Trial Flight but Her Commander Points Out Construction and Tests Give Feeling of Security and Confidence.

Friedrichshafen, Germany, Oct. 8.—High cross winds prevented a trial flight by the Zeppelin Z. R.-3 today.

(Copyright, 1924, by International News Service.)

(By Dr. Hugo Eckener.)

By Telegram to The Freeman.

Friedrichshafen, Germany, Oct. 8.—In order to cross the Atlantic in safety an airship must be well constructed and must be in the best possible condition. All its organs must function perfectly. Trial flights have proved these three points in the case of the Z. R.-3 and have given us all a feeling of absolute security and complete confidence.

The entire construction of the ship, including the stabilization fins, are as firm and as compact as could possibly be desired. The stopping and steering control, the valves and ballast equipment have been thoroughly tested; the gas cells proved faultless and the outer bag is in the best condition.

The motors with which we first encountered difficulties are now in such good shape that I presume all five of the engines could hold out for four days or even longer, although it would be possible to take the airship across the Atlantic with four motors, or even three. It can be seen that the upper works are fit.

Furthermore, the fuel we carry is of unusually fine quality. It is as serviceable per unit as possible and keeps the motors clean.

TICKETS TONIGHT.

Some Good Seats Still Obtainable for "The Womanless Wedding."

For the benefit of those who are anxious to attend the second performance of "The Womanless Wedding" at the Kingston High School Auditorium this evening, it is stated that there are still a number of good seats that may be had at the door this evening. The exchange of seats for the first night by those who desire to attend them has made it possible for the management to offer some excellent selections to those planning to attend tonight's performance.

Cancels Connecticut Speeches.

By Telegram to The Freeman.

New Haven, Conn., Oct. 8.—Democratic state headquarters here this afternoon received a message from Governor Smith's secretary at Boston, announcing that the governor is ill with rheumatism and is forced to cancel his engagements for tomorrow at Providence, New Haven and Waterbury.

Port Even Women Democrats.

The secretary of the Women's Democratic Club of Port Even requests the presence of all the members at a special meeting tonight at 8 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Thomas Tucker, Broadway, Port Even.

Slemp Gives Lie To LaFollette

Secretary to President Denies Charge of Republican "Slush Fund"—LaFollette Says He Wants Full Investigation.

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Washington, Oct. 8.—C. Bascom Slemp, secretary to President Coolidge, issued the following statement today regarding Senator LaFollette's charge that a huge Republican "slush fund" is being raised to throw into doubtful political territory.

"Senator LaFollette's statements about my connection with the campaign are pure fabrication. I know nothing about the Republican national committee's finances, and I have no connection, directly or indirectly, with handling them. Neither will I have the future."

Wants Senatorial Investigation.

Hoboken, N. J., Oct. 8.—Reiterating his charge that the Republican party is collecting a vast slush fund to buy the election of President Coolidge, Senator Robert M. LaFollette, independent presidential candidate, again demanded today a full investigation by the Borah committee of campaign expenditures of all parties.

In a formal statement, LaFollette insisted that the Borah senate committee investigating campaign expenses be summoned into session immediately, subpoena managers of all parties and "compel them to produce books and papers and to testify fully regarding the collection and use of money in the presidential campaign."

"I intend to follow up vigorously my demand for an investigation of the special slush fund which is being collected under the direction of W. E. Mellon of Pittsburgh, brother of the secretary of the treasury, and Edward T. Stotesbury, the Philadelphia partner of J. P. Morgan, for the purpose of buying the election of Coolidge in the doubtful states," Senator LaFollette stated.

"It is vital that the American people know before election day exactly what the money interests are doing to influence their decision at the polls," he added. "I intend to see that they have this information. We have just begun to fight. Wall street shall not buy this election."

Tories Ask for Vote of Censure

Action of British Parliament May Result in Dissolving Law Making Body, Precipitating General Election.

By Telegram to The Freeman.

London, Oct. 8.—Sir Robert Horne, a Tory, moved in the House of Commons this afternoon that the Labor government should be censured for quashing a criminal case against the editor of a Communist newspaper.

He charged that this action was due to pressure from the extremists. The attorney general's conduct, he declared, showed inefficiency.

Premier MacDonald defended the course of the cabinet, saying: "If administration of law becomes the subject of political expediency, then justice will disappear."

Premier Ramsay MacDonald was on record as saying that, if the censure motion went through, his government would resign and ask King George to dissolve parliament, thus precipitating a general election.

Sir Robert Horne and Sir John Simon were designated to lead the Tory attack.

During the question hour the Tories continuously jeered and taunted the Laborites. Tory leaders were confident that the government would be defeated and compelled to resign. There was a full attendance of the house.

In addition to the Tory motion a Liberal motion demanding an investigation of the withdrawal of the Communist prosecution was before Commons.

LANDIS REFUSED TO HEAR PIRATE MANAGER.

By Telegram to The Freeman.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Oct. 8.—Commissioner Landis shut the door in my face when I tried to talk to him in Washington, and if he wants further information from me he will have to ask it," Barney Dreyfuss, owner of the Pittsburgh Pirates, said today when informed of New York dispatches stating that baseball's high commissioner would give him American League, another hearing on any charges they might have to make in connection with the New York Giants' player scandal.

Dreyfuss said he had not planned any alliance with Ban Johnson "or anyone else" to force a showdown on the Giant scandal.

Possibility of forcing the O'Connell-Dolan case into the courts was discounted by Dreyfuss, who said the case was not a matter for courts to decide.

COTTON CROP BIGGER.

Exceeds Last Year's Crop By Over Two Million Bales.

By Telegram to The Freeman.

Washington, Oct. 8.—The condition of the cotton crop in the United States on October 1, indicates a production this year of about 12,449,000 bales of 500 pounds gross, compared with 10,129,681 bales last year, the department of agriculture announced today.

Womanless Wedding Solves Great American Problem

Rotarians' Play at High School Auditorium Demonstrates How We Can Entertain Each Other Without Being Professional Players—Displays Ability of Kingston Men and Women.

THE BRIDE AND GROOM.

THE BRIDE AND GROOM.

"The Womanless Wedding" presented by the Kingston Rotary Club at the Kingston High School Tuesday evening was the most unique, entertaining, resplendent, artistic, picturesque and screamingly humorous wedding that Kingston ever witnessed. It was unique in its lack of femininity and the fact that it was a wedding that absolutely everybody present approved of. It was entertaining throughout its varied and pleasing program that would appeal to all. It was resplendent, artistic and picturesque in the dances and living poetry. From the awakening of "Little Sister," carefully guarded by "Mammy," to the last distinguished guest, the wedding was humorously funny because of its "Who's Who," its embryonic as well as fully matured wedding, and a lot of other things besides. In other words, "there wasn't one ordinary thing about it."

The program, stated that the "Place" was "Anywhere Below the Mason and Dixon Line," and the "Time," "Any Time Down South," and when the curtain parted there was "Little Sister," (Arthur Wicks) and her dollie fast asleep, curled up on a couch in a pretty living room. It took youthful Clarence Raichle, singing "Bubbles," splendidly, together with the appearance of "Black Mammy" (W. Davis Hawk) and the "Butler" (R. R. Rodie) to awaken Little Sister, after which the Butler announced the various features of the program and the arrival of the distinguished guests as they finished their parts at Keeney's, the Opera House, the Auditorium, or the Orpheum, wherever they were appearing that evening.

One of the most stunning and gorgeous numbers on the program was the "Song of India," given by Harold S. Brigham and Oriental chorus composed of Mrs. W. Davis Hawk, Mrs. Louis Kessler, Mrs. C. Raymond Everett, Mrs. George Hacker, Mrs. Walter Miller, Mrs. Stanley Matthews, Miss Mary Byrne, Mrs. Brigham and the sheik sang "The Song of India," admirably, while the grace of the dancers was as marked as the gorgeousness of their costumes, made still more resplendent by the skillful colored spot-lighting.

After the arrival of the gracious, hospitable mother of the bride (E. W. Hathaway), the dignified mother of the groom (Henry Battenfeld), and the kindly father of the groom (William S. Eltinge), a double quartet, composed of the following colored singers, Mrs. Benjamin F. Johnston, Miss Mildred Messinger, Mrs. Charles F. Lieske, Mrs. Arthur Wicks, Herman La Tour, Arthur Rifenbary, Harry Clearwater and John T. R. Hall (secured from a plantation in Mississippi) sang very effectively several original Negro folk songs.

After W. DeKowski had captivantly sung "It Had to Be You," and Harry Connelly, Donald Steinert, Tom Rowland, Charles Vogel, James Davies, Howard Terwilliger, William DeKowski, William Malsenbender, with Howard Kline had called forth much applause with their singing of "There is Yes! Yes! in Your Eyes," a mighty close and serious rival of the bride, "The Old Maid" (Harry P. Dodge), in most fetching lavender costume, was announced, bringing along "The Old Bachelor," Ernest R. Acker. Everybody in Kingston knew Mr. Dodge could do a lot of things well, but who would ever have guessed what a fascinating, intriguing, gushing, coy old maid he could be? And he looked so pretty, too! And he just raved that old bachelor right up to the last word!

One of the cleverest hits of the evening, done to a turn, was "The Parade of the Wooden Soldiers," given by Fanny Kelleher, Geraldine McKlosky, Millicent McLaughlin, Marion Byrne, Natalie DeWitt, Julia Burgevin, Dorothy MacFadden, Helen McCann, Ottilia Riccobono, Florence Lutz, Dorothy Ganniz, Cennith Caswell, Priscilla Davis, Marion Healy, Eleanor Champlin and Virginia Herdman, in uniform. The soldiers were obliged to give an encore, as were practically all of the performers in group or solo parts.

Now that "Old Maid" was a most designing person every minute of the time so just as a matter of self-defense, the Old Bachelor sang, "No One's Fool," to keep up his courage, against the wiles of the fervent singing of "June Night," by the Old Maid. And there everybody had another surprise, for who knew what an excellent vocal soloist Mr. Dodge could be? "You never can tell!"

Act I closed with the piquant, saucy "Doodie Doo Doo" dance, given snappily by Helen Caswell. What had become of all right, Oh! that was coming along all right, in spite of the mischievousness of Little Sister and the "powerfully amorous" antics of Black Mammy. The guests were arriving, frantically, there were Norma Talmadge, (William Malsenbender), Mary Pickford, (H. Terwilliger), Constance Talmadge, (D. Steinert), Marion Davies, (William De Kowski), and each would have been known without announcement, which is some compliment to the "Make-up" artist. Act II was made up entirely of exquisite tableaux and aesthetic dancing. The "Living Poetry," tableaux, with Ernest Smith posing with masterful grace as the gilt statue of "Living Poetry," were the acme of artistic effectiveness. The Toe Dance—"Parfum Exotique" given by Elsie Gleason, was given with professional skill and was followed by a lovely "Bailoon" dance, given charmingly by Ottilia Riccobono and Priscilla Davis, this charming dance being the prelude to the exceedingly graceful and picturesque Scarf Dance participated in by Fanny Kelleher, Florence Lutz, Geraldine McKlosky, Eleanor Champlin, Marion Healy, Dorothy MacFadden, Lillian Herdman, Mabel Kirschner, Natalie DeWitt, Cennith Caswell, Millicent McLaughlin, Helen McCann, Julia Burgevin, Dorothy Connelly. It was all a setting for the fascinatingly spirited and graceful

Chinese Pirates Loot Rich Ship

In Reign of Outlaw and Pistol, They Spent Two Days Leisurely Looting Vessel and Passengers of $250,000.

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Amoy, China, Oct. 8.—Piracy and terror stalked the decks of the passenger steamer Ningshin while a gang of freebooters looted her rich cargo in a two day reign of cutlass and pistol, recounted today by white passengers on the vessel's arrival from Shanghai.

Two native members of the crew fell before the pirates' fire. A taken from passengers and cargo totalled 500,000 taels, ($250,000) including thirty cases of silver taken from the hold.

Seven foreign passengers escaped injury, although robbed of money and valuables. They included Mrs. N. Overholt, G. H. Bartlett, R. Hightower and L. Brown.

The band of 34 pirates boarded the vessel at Shanghai. Three hundred other Chinese passengers also sailed on the Ningshin, a 2,897 ton ship of the San Peh Steam Navigation Company's fleet.

The ship was standing off Wenchow October 3 when the pirates struck. Stationed at strategic points about the vessel, the freebooters cast off the guise of harmless coolies and at a preconcerted signal whipped out guns and knives. Pistol shots backed up their command to surrender.

A native quartermaster at the wheel flung to the deck, dead, a sailor fell. In a brief skirmish, command of the vessel passed into the hands of the raiders whose leader ordered the captain to sail southward along the coast into Bias Bay.

In this shelter, less than thirty miles from Hong Kong, the band leisuredly looted the ship and its passengers. When the vessel had been cleaned of valuables in a two day search, the pirates put off in Chinese junk which had been moored in the bay.

Coloniez Mexico Is Japan's Dream

Mexico Does Not Bar Japanese But They Have Been Unable to Compete With Cheap Labor There—Now Studying Conditions.

By Telegram to The Freeman.

Washington, Oct. 8.—Japan is once more dreaming of colonizing Mexico. Angered and humiliated through the provisions of the new immigration act which effectively blocks further immigration into the United States, and otherwise against a stone wall in disposing of her surplus population, Tokio is forced to seek a feasible colonization scheme in Mexico. This became known today when Eiichi Kimura, counsellor of the Japanese embassy here, left for Mexico on a trip that will carry him to every part of the country.

Kimura's mission, it said, will be to discover some way in which a successful Japanese experimental colony can be set up in northern Mexico.

Although Mexico has no bar to Japanese immigration at present, Japanese immigration has never been a success there because of the great mass of Mexican cheap labor with which the Japanese have been unable to compete.

CORNELL HOSE WANTS ITS CAPTAIN AS DEPUTY CHIEF.

At the regular monthly meeting of Cornell Hose Company held Tuesday evening at the fire house, the company voted to donate $10 to the Salvation Army. The members also directed A. J. Murphy, secretary of the company, to write the board of fire commissioners urging the appointment of Captain Henry Albright as deputy fire chief to fill the vacancy created by the promotion of Deputy Chief Murphy to fire chief. Captain Albright became a volunteer fireman when 15 years of age and served as a volunteer for ten years. For the past eleven years he has been a member of the paid fire department, and nine of those years has served as captain of Cornell Hose.

DIVISION SUPERINTENDENT CALKINS DIES SUDDENLY.

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Albany, N. Y., Oct. 8.—Charles H. Calkins, 49, superintendent of the Mohawk Division of the New York Central, is dead at his home here today.

Returning last evening from Syracuse, where he had been inspecting railroad work, Calkins was taken ill a few minutes after reaching his home. Two doctors were called but he died shortly before midnight.

FIRE AT HIGHLAND CAUSED $5,000 DAMAGE SUNDAY

Damage estimated at $5,000 was caused by fire of unknown origin which destroyed the garage at the Shady Lawn Lake House at Highland early Sunday evening. When firemen arrived, flames had gained such headway little could be done for the building. Members of the household succeeded in getting three automobiles out of the burning garage.

Arrested for Parking.

William A. Kaercher was arrested by Officer Fout on Tuesday on a charge of parking his car in front of the Fair street postoffice for an hour and a half. He gave bail for his appearance later in police court.

Giants Forge Ahead In Third With One Run

Record Crowd Today at Polo Grounds Viewing Fifth Series Game—Bentley Opposes Johnson—Lindstrom Again Stars at Third.

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Polo Grounds, New York, Oct. 8.—The second and final act of the drama known as Walter Johnson versus the New York Giants was enacted in the fifth game of the world's series this afternoon and probably the greatest crowd that ever inundated the Polo Grounds sat in at the death. An hour and a half before game time, the identity of the prospective corpse was still to be determined but even at this early moment a throng of 53,000 waited patiently for the demise.

It was more of a feverish crowd than New York has known in many years the kind that revelled in baseball dramatics before McGraw began promiscuously tearing leaves out of his check book. Johnson's second attempt to befuddle the Giants was in part responsible.

Another contributing factor was that the club winning today would sever the existing deadlock at two victories each and stake itself to an extremely dapper chance to step home with the title.

In spite of the fact that overnight weather conditions were a bit dubious, not to say wet, hundreds of citizens haunted the closed gates this morning. The original vigilantes were multiplied by thousands when the gates opened at 11 o'clock and by noon 20,000 customers of the petty cash variety were present.

Scalpers, buying up tickets yesterday at fancy prices, sold tickets with two handed rapidity. Much activity also was shown by gamblers, professional and otherwise. W. L. Darnett and Company declared that it had placed $11,000 against $10,000 that the Senators would win today and that it held many commissions to be wagered at six to five that the Senators would win the series. They were generally accepted along Broadway as logical quotations.

Just before the Senators came on the field at 12:55, Stanley Harris announced his choice of Johnson as pitcher. He reserved decision on Roger Peckinpaugh, star short stop, who strained a tendon several days ago.

Speaking for McGraw, Hughey Jennings said that the Giant pitching choice lay between Neft, Ryan and McQuillan. All three took their places in batting practice. Neft would have been the logical selection except that it was feared his injured hand had not recovered sufficiently to permit him to work today.

The injured Peck failed to impress in batting practice, having trouble with his swing. Asked if he expected to play the short stop repelled: "I don't think so."

Today's Line-up.

The Giants and Senators lined up as follows for the game this afternoon:

New York. Washington.

Lindstrom, 3b. McNelly, cf.

Frisch, 2b. Harris, 2b.

Young, rf. Rice, rf.

Kelly, cf. Goslin, lf.

Terry, 1b. Judge, 1b.

Wilson, lf. Bluege, ss.

Jackson, ss. Ruel, c.

Gowdy, c. Miller, 3b.

Bentley, p. Johnson, p.

Umpires—Connolly, American, at plate; Klem, National, at first base; Dineen, American, at 2nd; Quigley, National, at third.

First Inning.

Washington—McNeely up. Ball one, high. Strike one called. McNelly lined to Lindstrom, the Giant third baseman spearing the drive by leaping in the air.

Harris up. Ball one, inside. Foul, strike one, ball two, wide, ball three, high, strike two called. Harris fired to Wilson.

Rice up. Rice flied to Terry. No runs, no hits, no errors, none left.

New York—Lindstrom up. Lindstrom singled over second.

Frisch up. Strike one, swung. Ball one, high. Foul, strike two. Ball two, Ball three, wide. Frisch fouled to Miller, who made a pretty catch near the Washington bench.

Young up. Ball one, high. Young flied to McNelly.

Kelly up. Ball one, inside, high. Strike one, called. Lindstrom out, stealing second. Ruel to Harris. No runs, one hit, no errors, none left.

Second Inning.

Washington—Goslin up. Ball one, high. Goslin safe at first, beating out an infield hit.

Judge up. Ball one low. Foul strike two. Judge flied to Wilson.

Bluege up. Strike one called. Ball one wide. Ball two low inside. Foul strike two. Ball three low. Foul, Goslin in out at second Terry to Jackson.

Bluege lifted a high fly back of first, which Terry dropped but picked up in time to get Goslin at second thus avoiding an error.

Ruel, Ball one wide. Ball 2 inside. Strike one. Ball 3 wide. Ball 4 inside. Ruel walked.

Miller up. Ball one inside. Ball 2 wide. Ball 3 inside. Strike one called. Strike two called. Miller out.

And The Guests Never Knew

THERE'S a saying that "What people do not know, doesn't hurt them." It isn't always true—but you'll admit that it won't hurt a guest to think that your cotton sheets and pillow cases are real linen. That's what people think when such fabrics are starched with LINIT, the remarkable new laundry starch.

LINIT makes inexpensive cotton materials look and feel like linen. It is the kind of starch the great fabric makers use. It gives your wash garments and household fabrics that soft, pliable finish they had when first brought from the store.

By penetrating every thread, LINIT strengthens the fabric and prolongs the life of the material.

THE EVENING GOWN DESERVES A SCARF.

(By Eleanor Gunn.)

"Roll your own" does not necessarily apply to scarves. It may apply to the scarf which, in Oriental fashion, winds about the head, as in the sketch. These self-made turbans, as they have been rather prosaically dubbed, were offered several months ago, and have already a record of considerable success behind them. But here is a new version, in Moorish vein.

As an adjunct for sports wear, the scarf needs no brief; as an accessory for evening, it is deserving of a good word, for many a harvest moon has waxed and waned since bare shoulders have been veiled with tulle. The evening scarf is now much under discussion. It may be a single layer of tulle, or may be painted, gilded, fur-edged, appliqued with petals, feather trimmed, spangled—almost anything, so long as it is dainty and effective. When fringe is used, it is frequently of ostrich, and sometimes of metal. Scarves may also boast bands of lace, or be entirely of lace.

Ombre chiffons have a place in the regard of women who appreciate the value of color—and colored embroidery on net makes for harmony in several instances. Of course many evening gowns have matching scarves, detached or a part of the gown itself, but the separate scarf may be jotted down, by those who do their Christmas shopping early, as a most desirable gift for the girl who dances and goes to parties in fluffy tulle and chiffons. Chiffon ones which have one or two bands of fur at one or both ends, have elegance and, by the way, the type with ends which are not duplicates, is calculated to arouse envy.

Cost of Living Brought to Minimum in Ecuador

Eggs in Oriente, a province of Ecuador, cost nominally 10 cents a dozen, which in United States currency would be 2½ cents, but since the producer receives merely a yard of cloth in exchange this barter brings the cost of a dozen of eggs down to 8 mills in American money. A person with a fixed income of $25 a month can live comfortably in Oriente. Almost no one pays house rent. A five-room two-story house costs about $45 to build, writes H. S. Dickey in Current History Magazine.

The Indian boys are quite efficient as house attendants, but their manners vary somewhat from those of the trained servant at home. It is not unusual for one of them to burst into the master's bedroom at dawn smoking a 4-inch cigarette, and the whole family gathers around to see one shave. Each servant works for one week and receives at the end of that time one yard of cloth, which is enough for a pair of trousers. This satisfies his wants, so he vacates and another takes his place.

Poor layers eat just as much feed as good layers—

You can make them turn some of it into eggs!

WHATEVER the amount—whatever the kind—no feed is the right feed for poultry unless they can turn it quickly into tissue, bone, energy, and eggs.

Some fowls use all their food to maintain bodily health and strength. That means they waste a large part of it—for other birds, eating no more, lay great numbers of eggs simply because they get the last ounce of nourishment from their feed.

Make good layers out of poor ones—and better ones out of good ones—by fermenting their daily feed with Fleischmann's Pure Dry Yeast! It makes the feed easy to digest and assimilate, easy to convert speedily into vigor, health, and eggs. And it supplies, in its highest concentrated form, the essential vitamin B, the vitamin of growth.

You can get Fleischmann's Pure Dry Yeast right here in town. A free booklet will tell you the amazing story of this remarkable food adjunct. Carry home a package today—and boost your egg profits!

Giant Dirigible Speeds Westward

Shenandoah, on 9,000 Mile Test Flight, Saluted by Southern Cities as She Follows the Setting Sun.

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Aboard U. S. S. Shenandoah, Oct. 7.—Approaching the Alabama-Mississippi boundary, the Shenandoah at 9 o'clock this morning completed the first 24 hours of her 9,000 mile test flight without mishap. Headed due west, the giant dirigible was making 35 miles per hour.

Sailing smoothly at an altitude of 1,500 feet, the Shenandoah crossed the lower tip of the Allegheny mountains at a speed of 45 miles an hour, at 7 o'clock this morning.

Atlanta was sighted at 4:25 just as day was breaking and as the Georgia city's populace was awakening. A salvo of locomotive whistles echoed through the clouds to the wonderment of those on board the Shenandoah.

Carrollton, Ga., was passed at 6:32 o'clock. On the dirt roads across the foothills of Alabama, farmers with their families could be seen driving to nearby villages for the day's shopping. On sighting the Shenandoah, they stopped to gaze in amazement at the dirigible.

The ship's speed was increased approximately 35 miles an hour shortly after daybreak when the wind died down.

It took nearly twenty hours to make the journey from Lakehurst to Atlanta, about as far as from Lakehurst to Chicago, which the Shenandoah negotiated at a speed of 35 miles an hour a year ago.

Officers of the ship said unless some difficulty is encountered, the Shenandoah will be at Fort Worth before midnight.

Heavy Fighting In China's War

By Telegram to The Freeman.

Shanghai, Oct. 8.—Heavy fighting was in progress today in the vicinity of Sunkiang, where an encircling movement by which the Kiangsu forces hope to gain a pathway to Shanghai, is still in progress.

Despite the fact that the Kiangsu have brought up heavy reinforcements and extended their lines three miles along the railway, the Chekiang defenders stubbornly held the vital railway line.

Train service has been halted as the Kiangsu fire is sweeping the right of way.

Assaulting Chihli Positions.

Tien Tsin, Oct. 8.—Chang Tso Lin's infantry, artillery and airplanes were combining today in a tremendous assault on the Chihli positions at Shanghai Kuan, according to advices reaching here.

His airplanes have dropped bombs on Chihli troop trains as they stood in Shanghai Kuan station. The Chihli leaders are rushing up reinforcements.

Knuckles Didn't Blacken Her Eye

Imogene Wilson, Actress, Wears Black Eye, But Friend Denies Responsibility—"Something Wrong With It."

By Telegram to The Freeman.

London, Oct. 8.—This was moving day for Imogene Wilson, friend of Frank Tinney, but she didn't go to Paris as previously announced. Instead she moved into the flat at 25 Germain street, previously occupied by Tinney, who has moved elsewhere, keeping his new home secret.

Friends of Tinney said that Miss Wilson is still looking for a London engagement.

Miss Wilson wore a black eye for several days, giving rise to reports that her cave man friend had again been saying it with knuckles.

"Reports that I gave her a black eye are all bunk," said Tinney. "Honestly. She had to wear a patch over one eye for several days. There was something wrong with it, but it is all right now."

SAYS JENNINGS ERRED SENDING MEUSEL HOME.

By Telegram to The Freeman.

New York, Oct. 8.—While giving the full meed of credit to the Senators, particularly to Harris and Gosha, for winning the fourth game of the world series, John McGraw today took occasion to blame his lieutenant, Hughey Jennings, for its loss.

"I disagree with Jennings' judgment in sending Meusel home in the eighth on Wilson's double," McGraw said. "The run wouldn't have been scored in any case. If Meusel had been held at third, we would have had men on second and third with one out. As it was, we had a man on second with two out. The worst of it was that we had Meusel on the run at the time."

Nash Will Filed.

In surrogate's court the last will and testament of Carrie Louise Nash of Kingston has been admitted to probate. Henry D. Ellinger is named executor. Value of estate exceeds $5,000. The relationship is three brothers and a sister residing in the west. There are also seven legatees, none to five unknown. The President and Fellows of Harvard University are legatees in $2,000, and Nellie Silver, Kingston, legatee to $400. Virgil B. Van Wagoner attorney for the petitioner.

World Series Side Lights

By Telegram to The Freeman.

Polo Grounds, New York, Oct. 8.—As a result of ground keepers having used blotter mats all morning because of the last night's rain, the Polo Grounds was no wetter just before the game time than the Bering Sea.

Judge Landis, however, refused to break faith with his public and said "let the game go on" taking the stand that the Senators and Giants could wear rubbers in the infield and hip boots or diving suits in the outfield.

The musicians who keep the fans' spirits up during the hours before "play ball" used their benches for life rafts. They abandon ship at 2 p. m., when they can change into dry socks.

At 12:45 the ground keepers had not yet appeared with bell buoys for the base sacks and the players were getting anxious.

The press box was awash with a heavy surf breaking over the first two rows.

Frank Frisch was planning to use the Australian crawl when the time came to do some of the sliding for which he is noted. A muddy track is duck soap for the Giants star second sacker.

"Whose kidding us?" asked the Senators of one another when they reached the clubhouse. They found a letter there addressed to Jimmy O'Connell, care of the Senators.

E. Lawrence Phillips, the official announcer of Griffith Stadium, told the Senators he was going to pitch a party in Washington tomorrow night. And I wish you'd all come if you win the series tomorrow," he added in his lullaby voice.

The Senators told him to go ahead and lay covers for 25 because the series was as good as in the national museum right now.

PASSENGER AVIATION.

We hear so much about the passenger aviation lines in Europe, there being sixteen lines out of London alone to points on the Continent, that we naturally suppose the development of air travel there to be far in advance of that found in any other part of the world. It is surprising, therefore, to read of what appears to be equal advance in passenger aviation in the South American republic of Colombia, where it is now possible for travellers to fly over the mighty Andes and cover 625 miles in about eight hours, a journey that formerly required from eight to fifteen days. This is not all, for there are said to be five other passenger aviation routes now in operation in Colombia. This rapid advance in passenger aviation in a supposedly "backward" region is said to be due to the urgent need in a mountainous country where ordinary travel is slow and difficult.

The lack of such urgent need in the United States has been given as a reason for the curious fact that our country is so far behind in this particular. In our open and highly developed country ordinary travel is so easy, comfortable and swift, it is pointed out, that there is no such urgent need of travel by airplane. But this is more or less true of much of Europe also, and there must be other reasons. Aviators have been quoted as saying that the difficulty with us is a "public opinion" which rates aviation as still experimental and unsafe, implying that we, as a conservative people, prefer to await a more complete test.

FARM WORK AND DELINQUENTS.

Society is organized for self-protection, and the extent to which society is responsible in the matter of up-building its delinquents and defectives may be a question for argument. Apparently, however, general sentiment supports the theory that the delinquent and defective must be given first aid, at least in the matter of pointing out new pathways to improvement.

It is conceded, that the problem is one which is highly fundamental and in which society appears to be more concerned as the years go by. It is not so long ago that organized society chose to permit its defectives to take care of themselves. The mentally deficient, unless dangerous to other members of society, were allowed to exist largely as they chose to and little attention was accorded them.

In this day there is much discussion of "making over" the delinquent and defective. New York State maintains at tremendous expense eleemosynary and penal institutions in which this theory of the reclamation of the individual is being tested. If an expert were to visit these institutions he would find, it is reported, that in contrast to the theory upon which they were conducted some years ago—namely, one of punishment through solitary incarceration or otherwise—there is highly prevalent and in operation the theory that the delinquent, through great care and effort, much instruction—physical as well as mental—may undergo a metamorphosis from which he will emerge as a helpful and constructive cog in the great human machine.

Naturally there is extended interest in this problem. Of course, the real test of this theory of reclamation is the percentage of those who return to the old trail after leaving an institution as a graduate and with a pronouncement of renovation and improvement.

It has been stated that it is very difficult to obtain correct data as to these percentages. Moreover, such percentages, it is conceded, would naturally be quite variable, since the effectiveness of training is dependent upon the absorptive ability of the individual and his degree of resistance. Time was when instruction was depended upon largely in the effort to develop our defectives. Today great stress is being placed on the physical factor in this work, and it is urged by those who are strong in their opinions that the delinquent can be rescued and the defective improved and made a good citizen and that great advances are being made in the solution of this world-old problem.

Persons connected with the various Institutions housing defectives and delinquents afford an excellent opportunity for physical effort, which is held to be a strong factor in the up-building process. They provide for physical development, and the products therefrom are an asset in the matter of furnishing fresh food. The interest of the delinquent is often aroused by the farm project in which he is employed.

There is demand now for increased facilities for the care of the wards of the state. The institutions are taxed now to more than capacity. New York State's bill for this work is increasing from year to year.

THE BIG MEAL BEFORE RETIRING.

I have frequently suggested, that where you find it hard to get to sleep, that a little warm soup or milk might help, by bringing the blood away from the brain to the digestive apparatus.

Of course, the other suggestions must be tried first.

You remember there were a number of them, from the counting of sheep to the reading of a dry book. The idea behind all these was that your attention, your thought, should be dulled by monotony of some kind. The monotony of doing something uninteresting for some time.

However, there is a point about the eating before retiring that is worth thinking about.

You will remember that if at noon time you eat a heavy meal, you feel a bit heavy and sleepy for the first part of the afternoon.

Your blood is down doing the work of digestion, and your brain is not so alert. The same principle, of course, holds at night. You may sink off into a heavy slumber in a very few minutes.

When you awake in the morning at your usual time, you feel somewhat heavy and sleepy, and wonder why this should be, considering the good night's rest you have just had. Why are you not refreshed?

Well, the food you took into you, being a real meal, will take the stomach some hours to prepare for further digestion.

Then the small intestine gets busy absorbing this into the blood, the liver does its work of selecting materials to manufacture sugar and bile, and all the way along the digestive apparatus, work is in full swing.

There has been really no rest—no sleep—for this part of your body.

Now, it needs rest just the same as any other part.

So if you are tired mentally and physically when you go to bed, you will need sleep or rest for your body and brain anyway, and some extra sleep or rest, to make up for the energy required to handle the food you have eaten before you went to bed.

The point is, that a little food before retiring may just suit your needs exactly, by gently drawing a small quantity of blood from the brain.

A heavy meal, especially if you are very tired, is a mistake.

TODAY WE CELEBRATE

JONATHAN MAYHEW.

The first clergyman in the American Colonies to attain prominence as an advocate of liberalism was Jonathan Mayhew, who was born in Martha's Vineyard, Mass., 204 years ago today. He was the son of Experience Mayhew, famous as a missionary among the Indians. He graduated from Harvard in 1747, and was ordained minister of the West Church in Boston, a post which he held until his death in 1766.

While most of the clergy of that period were zealous monarchists, Mayhew was a staunch Republican in politics, and his preaching and his writings were remarkable for the liberalism, also for their controversial character. He was bold and outspoken as a Whig, cooperating with Otis and others in their resistance to measures of the British Parliament, while he himself was engaged in a controversy with Dr. Secker, Archbishop of Canterbury, regarding theological matters. Many of his sermons and tracts were published in England, where they enjoyed wide popularity among political and religious liberals. Jonathan Mayhew was a descendant of Thomas Mayhew, who emigrated to New England in 1641, and received a grant of the larger part of the island of Martha's Vineyard.

WINGS.

The first attempt to provide man with wings, so that he "might soar as a bird," was probably that of Watson F. Quimby, a Delaware inventor, who received a United States patent on his invention just 52 years ago, October 8, 1872. Previous flying machines had been based on the balloon principle, but Quimby's apparatus was entirely original, consisting of side and dorsal wings constructed in semi-circular form, twelve feet in diameter. They were to be operated with hands and feet, stirrups being provided for the latter. Simple as this mechanical Pegasus seemed to operate, the wings refused to work, and nobody over left terra firma on them.

PRINCESS ELIZABETH STUART.

Elizabeth, second of the ill-fated daughters of the ill-fated Charles I, was born at St. James's Palace in 1635. When she was six years old, civil war broke out in England, and the remaining nine years of her life were spent with strangers. During this period she saw her father only a few times, and the last time was the day before his execution. The meeting was heartrending. Charles took the child on his knee and gave her such advice as might be expected from a dying father. A year and a half after his death, she, too, at the age of 15, breathed her last. By some it was said that Cromwell had decided to apprentice her to a button maker, but historians deny this. At least it is known that "The Protector" provided amply for her during her short and unhappy lifetime. A monument was erected for her by Queen Victoria on the occasion of the rebuilding of the church at Newport, where she was buried.

Common Council In Busy Session

B. P. W. to Borrow $23,033—Keopen Files Claim for Damages to Auto—First Avenue Residents to Pay for Sewer in Three Installments—Other Matters.

The board of public works was given permission to borrow $23,033.53 at the regular monthly session of the common council held Tuesday evening at the city hall. Of that amount $12,764.12 is to pay the city's share of the new bridge at Higginville, and $10,269.41 is the amount due the Willite Company for work done on the streets.

Katherine S. Osterhout submitted a deed of Manor Place to the city and it was referred to the board of public works and the corporation counsel.

Charles Keopen of 100 West Union street filed a claim for $300 damages to his automobile which he claims was damaged to that amount when it skidded and went off the bank on North street at Terry's brickyard on September 22. The claim was referred to the auditing committee and Corporation Counsel Jenkins.

The board of public works has recently completed the construction of a sanitary sewer in First avenue at a cost greater than it was first expected, and for that reason the request of the taxpayers on that street that they be allowed to pay the sewer assessment in three installments was granted.

Alderman J. Philip Beichert of the bus committee called a meeting of the committee for the evening of October 14, at which time the question of obtaining a permanent bus terminal would be taken up.

The following motions and resolutions were introduced and referred to the various boards and committees:

By Alderman Beichert—That the board of public works take action to increase the safety of persons using the sidewalk on Manor avenue as there is a two foot depression in the walk at a certain point; that the brick pavement on Broadway at the West Shore tracks be relaid; that as Manor Place has now been deeded to the city, that steps be taken to establish the grade in the street, extend the water main and construct a sewer in the street; that water mains be laid on Westman street and Clarendon avenue; that sewer be laid in Progress street; that the board of public works clean up the vacant lot on O'Neil street, between Ten Broeck and Bruyn avenues; that board of public works repair defect in grade of Willite on Broadway in front of the H. S. Crispell Company, that the southeast corner of Thomas street at Broadway be cut off about a foot and a half and the present electric light pole removed to some other location as it would widen the corner and make it easier for busses to make the turn.

By Alderman James J. Sweeney—That as the winter months were now approaching, that the first two streets to be made passable shall be Andrew street, leading to the Benedictine Hospital, and Jansen avenue, leading to the Kingston City Hospital; that as soon as the board of public works has the work of laying a new pavement in Wilbur avenue completed, action be taken toward repairing some of the streets in the Third ward, such as Tubby street, Hemlock avenue, Van Gasbeck street, Lincoln street, Grant street and Stephan street; that holes in Abbey street be filled; that an incandescent light be placed between Clifton avenue and Tubby street; that a traffic standard be placed at Hasbrouck and Foxhall avenues, as there is an auto collision there daily.

By Alderman Fox—That holes in the asphalt pavement on Abrum street made by the Electric Company in removing a tree, be attended to at once; that holes in Gill street, between Strand and Yeomans street, be filled; that culvert at foot of Willow street on North street be opened, and that holes in Willow street be filled.

The council after auditing bills then adjourned to Tuesday evening, October 21. President Dempsey presided, with Aldermen Van Wageningen, Beichert, James J. Sweeney, Schlip, Fox, Joy, Selts, John T. Sweeney, Edinger, Everett and Smith present. Aldermen Neice and Flannery had been excused.

PHINEAS AND THE MOTOR CAR

In Which Gasoline Takes Over the Job as Furnishing Motive Power of Mr. Cupid

By ELEANOR PORTER

Author of "Pollyanna," "Just David," Etc.

Copyright by Eleanor M. Porter.

PHINEAS used to wonder, sometimes, just when it was he began to court Diantha Bowman, the rosy-cheeked, golden-haired idol of his boyhood. Diantha's cheeks were not rosy now, and her hair was more silver than gold, but she was not yet his wife. And he had tried so hard to win her! Year after year the rosiest apples from his orchard and the choicest honey from his apiary had found their way to Diantha's table; and year after year the county fair and village picnic had found him at Diantha's door with his old mare and his buggy, ready to be her devoted slave for the day. Nor was Diantha unkindful of all these attentions. She ate the apples and the honey, and spent long contented hours in the buggy; but she still answered his pleadings with her gentle: "I haven't a call to marry yet, Phineas," and nothing he could do seemed to hasten her decision in the least. It was the mare and the buggy, however, that proved to be responsible for what was the beginning of the end.

"They were on their way home from the county fair. The mare, head hanging, was plodding through the dust, when around the curve of the road shot the one automobile that the town boasted. The next moment the whizzing thing had passed, and left a superannuated old mare lolling through a cloud of dust and dancing on two wobbly hind legs.

"Plague take them automobiles!" snarled Phineas through set teeth, as he saved at the reins. "I ax-pardon, I'm sure, Diantha," he added shamefacedly, when the mare had dropped to a position more nearly normal; "but I haven't a use for them 'ere contraptions!"

Diantha frowned. She was frightened—and because she was frightened she was angry. She said the first thing that came into her head—and never had she spoken to Phineas so sharply.

"If you'd have some use for 'em, Phineas Hopkins, you wouldn't be crawlin' along in a shiftless old rig like this; you'd have one yourself an' be somebody! For my part, I like 'em, an' I'm jest achin' ter ride in 'em, too!"

Phineas almost dropped the reins in his amazement. "Achin' ter ride in 'em," she had said—and all that he could give her was this "shiftless old rig" that she so scorned. He remembered something else, too, and his face flamed suddenly red. It was Colonel Smith who owned and drove that automobile, and Colonel Smith, too, was a bachelor. What if—Instantly in Phineas' soul rose a fierce jealousy. "I like a horse, myself," he said, with some dignity. "I want somethin' that's alive!"

Diantha laughed slyly. The danger was past, and she could afford to be merry.

"Well, it strikes me that you come pretty near havin' somethin' that won't alive jest 'cause you had somethin' that was!" she retorted. "Really, Phineas, I didn't s'pose Dolly could move so fast!"

Phineas bristled. "Dolly knew how ter move once," he rejoined grimly. "Cause nobody pretends ter say she's young now, any more'n we be," he finished with some defiance. But he dropped visibly at Diantha's next words.

"Why, I don't feel old, Phineas, an' I ain't old, either. Look at Colonel Smith; he's jest my age, an' he's got a automobile. Mebbe I'll have one some day."

To Phineas it seemed that a cold hand clutched his heart.

"Diantha, you wouldn't really—ride in one!" he faltered.

Until that moment Diantha had not been sure that she would, but the quaver in Phineas' voice decided her.

"Wouldn't I? You jest wait an' see!"

And Phineas did wait—and he did see. He saw Diantha, not a week later, pink-cheeked and bright-eyed, sitting by the side of Colonel Smith in that hated automobile. Nor did he stop to consider that Diantha was only one of a dozen upon whom Colonel Smith, in the enthusiasm of his new possession, was pleased to bestow that attention. To Phineas it could mean but one thing, and he did not change his opinion when he heard Diantha's account of the ride.

"It was perfectly lovely," she breathed. "Oh, Phineas, it was jest like flyin'!"

"Flyin'!" Phineas could say no more. He felt as if he were choking—choking with the dust raised by Dolly's plodding hoofs.

"An' the trees an' the houses swept by like ghosts," continued Diantha. "Why, Phineas, I could a' rode on an' on forever!"

Before the ecstatic rapture in Diantha's face Phineas went down in defeat. Without one word he turned away—but in his heart he registered a solemn vow: he, too, would have an automobile; he, too, would make Diantha wish to ride on and on forever!

Arduous days came then to Phineas. Phineas was not a rich man. He had enough for his modest wants, but until now those wants had not included an automobile—until now he had not known that Diantha wished to fly. All through the autumn and winter Phineas pinched and economized until he had lopped off all of the luxuries and most of the pleasures of living. Even then it is doubtful if he would have accomplished his purpose had he not in the spring, fallen heir to a modest legacy of a few thousand dollars. The news of his good fortune was not two hours old when he sought Diantha.

"I callate mebbe I'll be gettin' me one o' them 'ere automobiles this spring," he said, as if casually filling a part of the conversation.

"Phineas!"

At the awed joy in Diantha's voice the man's heart glowed within him. This one moment of triumph was worth all the long miserable winter with its butterless bread and tobaccoless pipes. But he carefully hid his joy when he spoke.

"Yes," he said nonchalantly. "I'm goin' ter Boston next week ter pick one out. I callate on gettin' a purty good one."

"Oh, Phineas! But how—how you goin' ter run it?"

Phineas' chin came up. "Run it?" he scoffed. "Well, I haven't no trouble yet steerin' a horse, an' I callate I won't have any more steerin' a mess o' senseless metal what hasn't got no eyes ter be seein' things an' 'gittin' scared! I don't worry none 'bout runnin' it!"

"But, Phineas, it ain't steerin'," ventured Diantha, timidly. "There's lots of little handles and things ter turn, an' there's some things you do with your feet. Colonel Smith did."

The name Smith to Phineas was like a match to gunpowder. He flamed instantly into wrath.

"Well, I callate what Colonel Smith does, I can," he snapped. "Besides,"—airily—"mebbe I shan't git the feet kind, anyhow; I want the best. There's as much as four or five kinds, Jim Blair says, an' I callate ter try 'em all."

"Oh-h!" breathed Diantha, falling back in her chair with an ecstatic sigh. "Oh, Phineas, won't it be grand!" And Phineas, seeing the joyous light in her eyes, gazed straight down a vista of happiness that led to wedding bells and bliss.

Phineas was gone some time on his Boston trip. When he returned he looked thin and worried. He started nervously at trivial noises, and his eyes showed a furtive restlessness that quickly caused remark.

"Why, Phineas, you don't look well!" Diantha exclaimed when she saw him.

"Well? Oh, I'm well."

"An' did you buy it—that automobile?"

"I did." Phineas' voice was triumphant.

Diantha's eyes sparkled. "Where is it?" she demanded.

"Comin'—next week."

"An' did you try 'em all, as you said you would?"

Phineas sturred; then he sighed.

"Well, I dunno," he acknowledged. "I haven't done nothin' but ride in 'em since I went down—I know that. But there's such a powerful lot of 'em, Diantha; an' when they found out I wanted one, they all took hold an' showed off their best pints—'demonstratin' they called it. They raced me up hill an' down hill, an' scooted me round corners till I didn't know where I was. I didn't have a minute ter myself. An' they went fast. Diantha—powerful fast. I ain't real sure that I'm breathin' natural!"

"But it must have been grand, Phineas! I should have loved it!"

"Oh, it was, 'course," asserted Phineas, hastily.

"An' you'll take me ter ride, right away?"

If Phineas hesitated it was for only a moment.

"Course," he promised. "Er—there's a man, he's comin' with it, an' he's goin' ter stay a little, jest ter—ter make sure everything's all right. After he goes I'll show ye a thing or two!" he finished with a swagger that was meant to hide the shake in his voice.

Four All-Electric Seagoing Dredges Will Soon Be in Operation to Help Keep Principal American Channels Open for Commerce

THE four all electric seagoing hopper dredges that will soon be operated by the U. S. S. Engineers' Corps from the various ports, namely, "A. Mackenzie," at Mobile, Ala.; "W. L. Marshall," at New York; "Dan C. Kingman," at Savannah, Ga., and "William T. Russell," at Seattle, Wash., to help keep the principal channels open in the North Atlantic, South Atlantic, Gulf and Pacific ports for coastwise and sea-going commerce, and the first of their kind ever built, are illustrated above as follows:

(1) The Ward-Leonard electrical system of pilot house control that enables the master of the dredge to have direct control over the Diesel Electric propulsion equipment, which consists of twin screw Westinghouse 800 hp propulsion motors supplied with power by three McIntosh and Seymour Diesel engines directly connected to three 700 KW Westinghouse generators which individually or collectively supply power for the propulsion and dredging operations. By turning the wheels mounted on the control station in front of the master and by operating the lever at his right hand the loaded dredge can be operated at any speed up to full speed and maneuvered as required for dredging and safe navigation.

(2) One of the dredges during a dredging test. These dredges move slowly along under their own power during the dredging operation, and when loaded with about two thousand tons of sand and mud speed at 1 1/2 knots to the deep sea for dumping and at a greater speed when returning. They are designed to operate at congested and distant points of channel, where this form of dredging is the safest and most economical.

The principal dimensions and particulars of all the four dredges are the same, namely, overall length, 285 ft. 5 in.; length between perpendiculars, 254 ft.; breadth molded, 46 ft.; depth molded, 23 ft. 6 in.; dead weight, 2,000 tons on a draft of 19 ft. 6 in.; capacity of hoppers, 1,250 cu. yards (usually weighs about 2,000 tons), and a loaded speed of 1 1/2 knots. All four dredges were built by the Sun Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Corporation at Chester, Pa.

(3) The drag, in the mid-ship section of the dredge raised by an electric motor for inspection. During the dredging operations this drag is pulled through the sand, mud, etc., at the bottom of the channel, and a motor driven centrifugal pump pumps the dredgings into the four hoppers, or bins, which have doors at the bottom for dumping the dredgings at sea.

(4) Opening the door at the bottom of the filled hopper to dump the sand, gravel, mud and goodness knows what into the deep sea. Sometimes money, relics, skeletons, etc., are recovered.

(5) Two of the hoppers filled with dredgings taken from a shallow channel and ready to be dumped into the deep sea to a depth of a mile or so.

(6) The 800 hp. Westinghouse motor driving the 26 in. centrifugal suction pump that can fill up the four hoppers with water in several minutes and with dredgings, depending upon the class of material, in fifteen minutes to several hours.

FIRST PICTURES OF CHINESE WAR, SNAPPED UNDER HEAVY FIRE.

① NOVEL PROTECTION ② RED CROSS OPERATING TABLE ③ CHEKIANG ARTILLERYMAN ④ REMOVING WOUNDED ⑤ CHEKIANG SOLDIER ⑥ BRITISH MARINE ⑦ CHEKIANG GUNPOUNDER

These are the first pictures of the fighting for the possession of Shanghai, China, snapped by a staff correspondent of the International News Service. Believe it or not, Chinese soldiers carry their umbrellas into action, and in Figure No. 1, a Chekiang Province gunner defending the city may be seen seeking shelter under his in a trench on the Huangpu front. The Red Cross operating table on the same front was made from two Red Cross kit boxes and a door panel. The Chekiang artilleryman, under heavy fire, finds a safe berth under his gun. Despite the intensity of the fire, his tea kettle at the right was going merrily. The wounded are removed in rickshaws by conscripted coolies, who also must take up ammunition and food. The photograph of the Chekiang private was taken under rifle and machine gun fire, but he didn't seem to mind. British marines are ashore and encamped in Jessfield Park, outside the foreign settlement in Shanghai, to protect foreigners. This modern Chekiang gun, surrounded by empty earth, was fired many times at Haangtu. The Chinese guns are of German, French and Japanese manufacture.

Poor Yesterday

YESTERDAY'S alarm clock was a dash of cold water thrown in the face. Yesterday never looked through a window glass or drove a Ford sedan. Yesterday could have stood all day pushing buttons, turning on faucets, shoveling in coal—and have never got a bit of hot water, electric light, or radiator heat. Yesterday mined for its salt, tilled for its bread, sheared and spun for its clothes. Yesterday lived to itself and died of diseases unknown.

Then was born Today.

Today gives you convenience, ease, speed. Advertised products have brought them. If you read the advertisements, you can gain more convenience, ease, speed. They tell of the new and better taking place of the old. They tell of the best means to secure them. They help you get what you want and know what you are getting. They assure you satisfaction.

Why make a Yesterday out of your life? Read the advertisements. Live Today.

"Where can Harold be?"

"Why?"

"He's been trying for a week to lose our cat, and as a last resort he took her up in his plane this morning. He said he would take her up 3,000 feet and drop her over the side."

"Well, what is there to worry about?"

"Lots. Harold isn't home yet, and the cat is."

There Are Some Things You Cannot Picture Nor Describe

The Silent Swiftmess: the Soft Smoothness: the Fleetness: the Flexibility—the Luscious Luxuriousness—of this "Vertical-8. Superfine" are indescribable. You must see and feel, to understand

SINCE IT WAS DISCOVERED, the great writers of the world have tried to describe, and famous artists essayed in vain to portray, the magnificence of the Grand Canyon of the Colorado.

YET YOU WHO HAVE SEEN IT—and who had read extensively about it—were speechless with emotion when your eyes first gazed upon this American Wonderland.

AND TRY AS YOU WILL, you cannot now describe it to your friends. When they ask you, you exhaust your vocabulary and finally in despair exclaim—"You must see, to understand and appreciate."

YOU CAN APPRECIATE, then, his feeling of impotence, when this writer is set the task of describing the various phases of performance of this latest product of the Rickenbacker laboratory and shops.

WHEN FOR THE FIRST time, with your own hand on the responsive steering wheel, your own foot on the sensitive accelerator, you tool her down a straightaway and round a turn, you will admit that never before, have you handled a real automobile.

HOW SHE "ROADS!"—hands off at a mile a minute or more, and still she holds straight as an arrow the crown of the road. Yet the slightest urge on the wheel—and she responds like the thoroughbred she is.

NOW FEEL the accelerator—you must press it gently at first for the response is instantaneous.

CLOSE YOUR EYES and try to estimate how rapidly she accelerates.

NOW GLANCE at the road—but not at the speedometer—and tell if you can, by the feel, how fast you are going.

NOW LOOK!—and you are going twice as fast as you thought.

WHAT IS THAT AHEAD?—looks, from here, like a steep hill.

BUT IT IS NO HILL—unless your senses deceive. For you are almost unconscious of your extra pressure on the accelerator, and she takes it as easily as if it were level stretch.

YOU WONDER how much steeper it would have to be to offer any perceptible resistance to this powerful car.

THAT GIVES you some idea for comparison with the best cars you have previously driven.

FORTY MILES feels like twenty, sixty like thirty—seventy like thirty, too!

NOW TRY THE BRAKES—those wonderful Rickenbacker 4-Wheel Brakes—which set the standard for present safety codes and revolutionized an industry.

TRY THOSE BRAKES! First at 20 miles per hour—if you are not used to first class 4-wheel brakes.

TRY THEM AT 40—50—60—or as fast as you dare to drive. You will be amazed to find that at any speed they are just as smooth, just as certain and just as silent.

NOTE THAT THEY DO NOT affect your steering in the slightest.

BUT—WHILE we are talking you are "feeling" something you cannot describe.

NOW YOU UNDERSTAND why it is futile to attempt to describe that which we have felt—and know you will feel—when first you drive this car.

SO WE INVITE YOU to come in and see; study in detail the many points of excellence.

DON'T DELAY. Come right now—or phone. . . . and a demonstrator will be at your door.

American Women Aware of Big Benefit Protective Tariff Has Proved to Home

THEY KNOW THAT WAGE EARNERS CANNOT FIND WORK TO KEEP THEM BUSY IF COMPETITION WITH CHEAP FOREIGN GOODS IS ALLOWED

This is the third of a series of five articles by Mrs. Alvin T. Hert, vice-chairman of the Republican National Committee, and chairman of the Women's Division of that committee. Mrs. Hert discusses what she considers vital campaign issues from the woman's standpoint.

BY MRS. ALVIN T. HERT

Mrs. Alvin T. Hert

The average American family is happy and prosperous today. The average American boy and girl have enough food and clothing to make them comfortable. For this we are all grateful. Every man and every woman who wants a job should have one.

There are fundamental laws of supply and demand. There are basic economic principles which must be satisfied before a job can be provided for the man who can fill it. The women of this country have demonstrated their ability to get at the real facts underlying any business problem. They are not satisfied with the half-truths which are frequently presented to them in tariff arguments.

It has been said frequently that women are the purchasing agents for the 25,000,000 families in the United States. This is true, but before they can purchase for these families they must have money in their pockets.

Women refuse to accept the statement that what the United States needs is free trade in order that we may buy cheaply the products of other countries.

How can we buy unless the wage earner of the family has a job and is earning money?

There are two sides to this tariff problem, the buying and the selling. Under the Democratic one-sided theory of low tariff on imported goods, this country has suffered the worst pangs of unemployment.

With this system at work, American women have known what it meant to be unable to buy bread for their children. At the same time, American men have known what it was to tramp the streets looking for work.

The average American working man is accustomed to high wages and his family is accustomed to a higher scale of living than is possible for the family of any other working man in the world. He knows that it is of no avail to have goods on a department store shelf marked at a slightly lower cost if he is unable to earn the money to buy them.

The Republican party's record shows that it has continually advocated a protective tariff.

The Democrats charge that a protective tariff keeps out imports and destroys competition. It must be clear that even if a Republican protective tariff law did keep out imports, the inevitable effect would be to create new American enterprises of like character and thus increase domestic competition in even greater proportion than foreign competition is diminished.

A recent writer stated that a tariff law "which affords every advantage to foreign sellers in the American market to the detriment of American labor and industry can hardly be held to benefit this country. Here in America we know that we must produce and earn before we can spend and consume."

A tariff law which diverts American money from the payment of American wages to the payment of foreign wages cannot possibly benefit the American working man.

The women voters of this country have heard President Coolidge recount the large revenue which has come to this country with the present protective tariff in vogue. They know that unemployment has been ended. They know that there is a job for every man in this country. Women know that they have more money in the family pocketbook to purchase comforts for their families when manufacturers are encouraged to manufacture goods which they can sell at a profit and thus give employment to men and women who want to work.

This question of the tariff is far-reaching and every thoughtful woman must understand that it is tied up in all directions with the income which the head of the family is able to earn. Every woman knows that it is vitally important that her husband should have an adequate income. Although this was a thoughtful answer when they go to the polls in November to cast a vote for the best interests of their families and the communities in which they live.

BEWARE THE COUGH OR COLD THAT HANGS ON

Chronic coughs and persistent colds lead to serious lung trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with twofold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and kills the germ.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by the medical fraternity as the greatest healing agency for the treatment of chronic coughs and colds and other forms of throat and lung troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and destroys the germs that lead to consumption.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of chronic coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, catarrhal bronchitis and other forms of throat and lung diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or the flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold, no matter of how long standing, is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Co., Atlanta, Ga. (Adv.)

Financial and Commercial

By Telegram to The Freeman.
New York, Oct. 8.—Bearsish traders took advantage of the small attendance in Wall street today and the general apathy of the outside public to launch a new drive against a number of the low priced industrial and specialty stocks, and succeeded in depressing prices in a few of the active issues. Selling also broke out in Chandler Motors and other stocks, which of late have been pushed down to record low levels, Chandler going to a new low of 30 1/2.

New merger rumors affecting prominent independent steel companies were heard in the financial district, stimulating interest in Bethlehem, Crucible and Gulf States Steel shares.

Standard Oil of New Jersey made a sharp recovery from yesterday's low level, but other oils were inactive and rather weak.

American can sold in a narrow price range; United States Steel and Baldwin, the other industrial leaders were generally higher; tobacco stocks advanced a point or more on announcement that the American Tobacco Company would split its stock two for one and reduce the par value of the stock from $100 to $50. Tobacco Products and Schulte also joined in the rally in the tobacco shares.

Sugar stocks were steady and shipping stocks made a slight improvement over Tuesday's close.

Cotton attracted attention by the sharp drop of 150 points at the maximum, but the government's report on crop conditions. Grains were irregular.

Meets Bad Roads In 100 Hour Run

Gulches a Foot Deep on Catskill Mountain Roads Cause an Hour's Delay to Chevrolet Which Resumes Trip When Repairs are Made.

The first twenty-four-hour run of the Chevrolet economy and endurance run, which is being conducted by Sutliff, Inc., local distributors of Chevrolet cars, was completed this morning at 8 o'clock at the garage on Maiden Lane at Broadway, when the car checked in with nearly one-quarter of the run completed. During the first twenty-four hours of the run, which was made partly over wet, slippery roads the Chevrolet touring car resumed 24 gallons of gasoline and one quart of oil. The mileage covered will not be made known until the end of the run on account of the guessing contest which is being conducted in connection with the run.

The first day of the run took the car over some of the worst roads in the section and particularly the Stony Clove road from Chichester to Hunter, which is in almost impassable condition since the recent rain storm, which washed the roadway out in several places leaving gulches a foot deep in the macadam. On this section of the road the driver experienced his first tire trouble when one of the shoes was cut by a sharp stone which penetrated the side of the tire. Five minutes were taken to change tires.

This same section of road was also responsible for the car taking 55 was discovered that the rivets on the two o'clock change at the garage on the left front spring frame bracket had become shorn off when the car dropped into a hole. The motor was kept running under the supervision of the official observer of the Ulster County Automobile Club, while repairs were made. This necessitated the punching and drilling out of the old rivets and the installing of new bolts.

When the car checked in at the garage a hasty examination revealed the fact that the rivets were shorn off and a call was sent to two mechanics to fix the car. Within twenty-three minutes after the call was registered two men called from bed were at the shop ready to go to work. The stop was officially observed by the observer of the Automobile Club and fifty-five minutes after checking in the car was again on the road. A total of one hour was lost in the twenty-four hours but during the entire time the motor was kept running.

Already several guesses in the guessing contest have been received. The first guess entered in the mileage contest was that the car would cover 3,500 miles in the 100 hour run.

Today after checking in and filling up with gas and oil the 100 hour non-stop Chevrolet car left for the southern part of the county and again checked in at the garage at 2 o'clock this afternoon when the run taken yesterday morning was started again. This routine will be followed until the end of the run at noon Saturday.

Yesterday two other Chevrolet non-stop cars passed through Kingston bound on the same mission as the local car. One car was from Delaware county and the other one was from Cossack. During the night the cars passed the car sent out by Sutliff, Inc., three times. The local endurance and economy run is one of many which is being conducted by Chevrolet cars in a nation wide contest.

One driver and an observer ride in the car at all times, the driver being relieved every six hours.

"Platonic Year"
The term "platonic year" is used in astronomy to denote the period of time required for the equinoxes to complete their revolution. The duration of this period is estimated at about 26,000 years, at the expiration of which time the various stars and constellations occupy the same positions relative to the equinoxes, that they did at the beginning. Tycho Brahe computed the length of the platonic year at 25,816 years; Ricciolus at 25,820 years. It is also called the great year.

Society Notes

Birthday Surprise Party.
About thirty friends of Mrs. Marvina L. Styles gathered at her home, 63 O'Neill street, Monday evening, and gave her a surprise party in honor of her birthday. A very enjoyable evening was spent in playing games and other amusements. After presenting her with a token of remembrance on behalf of her friends, refreshments were served. All departed at midnight, wishing Mrs. Styles many more happy birthdays.

Pleasant Party at Flatbush.
A party of friends gathered at the home of Mrs. Rachel Kappleyea at Flatbush on Thursday, October 2, and enjoyed a bountiful repast and afterwards many musical selections, accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Anderson. Those present were Mrs. Carrie Kappleyea and Master Charles Kappleyea, Mrs. Mary Halstead, Mrs. Storms, Mrs. Scheffel, Mrs. Parlow, Mrs. Ida Stewart, Mrs. Louisa Hahn, Mrs. Decker, Miss Suter, Miss Jane Dooley of Jersey City, Mrs. Harry Carle and Mrs. Falk.

Celebrate 77th Birthday.
On Friday afternoon, October 3, there was a birthday picnic party given in honor of the seventy-seventh birthday of John F. Blackwell, by his relatives, the Avery families of Kingston, at his home in Shokan, N. Y. The large number of gifts received by him gave testimony of the high esteem in which he is held by his relatives and neighbors, near whom he has lived for the last forty years. Mr. Blackwell is still hale and hearty in spite of his age and still has more ambition and ability than most men many years his junior. His care-free smile speaks for his idea of single blessedness.

NEW HURLEY.
New Hurley, Oct. 8.—Crosby Wilkin spent the week end with friends in Troy.

Mr. and Mrs. George Wright of Elizabeth, N. J., were in this place on Thursday of last week.

Mrs. Leland Van Kleek was called to Ridgewood, N. J., last Saturday on account of the illness of her father.

Speaking—Rev. J. W. Taylor.
Singing—Love Won My Heart.

Worse to Come
Having been served with a wedge of some yellow substance the husband poked at it cautiously with his fork and finally turned it over heavily on his plate, asking: "What is this?"

"Nothing," said the husband. "I thought my section weighed more than a pound. What are you going to make next?"

"Marble cake," said the wife, defiantly.—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

Wise Old Owl
The young hopeful of the family was just entering the age of late nights and notions.

One morning, after late hours the night before, the youth announced: "Paw, I've a notion to raise chickens."

Paw drew his eyebrows together and gruffly commented: "Better try owls. Their hours would suit you better."

Earth's Surface
The earth's surface consists approximately of 57,000,000 square miles of land and 140,000,000 square miles of water.

POULTRY

SUNLIGHT BIG AID IN CHICKS' GROWTH

Sunlight, as a direct cure for leg weakness, has been proven successful at the poultry department of the Wisconsin college of agriculture.

Experimental work with young chickens has demonstrated that leg weakness can be entirely prevented by exposing chicks to direct sunlight. Leg weakness is caused by lack of normal development of the bones due to lack of the right kind of feed. Another term applied to the disease is rickets and the scientist claims leg weakness is brought about directly by the absence of the anti-rachitic vitamin in the chick's ration, or in the absence of direct sunlight.

"A remarkable development in animal nutrition is the recognition that light is equivalent or supplementary to the anti-rachitic vitamin," declares J. G. Halpin of the poultry department.

"Since the ever increasing development of artificial incubation and brooding of chicks, considerable loss has resulted from leg weakness. In order to combat this injurious disease, poultry men must feed a ration which contains the necessary vitamin. This vitamin is present in cod liver oil, eggs, and some other materials. Unless the early chicks can get into direct sunlight or are fed material of this nature, they will be seriously handicapped in their development."

If the chicks cannot be placed out of doors or in direct sunshine, as is the case often with early hatched chicks, suitable additions to the rations should be fed to substitute for the necessary sunlight. A very satisfactory ration has been prepared by Halpin, and consists of the following ingredients:

Yellow corn, 50 parts; middlings, 20 parts; bone, 5 parts; lime rock, 5 parts; salt, 1 part; and skim milk to drink.

This ration is very successful when direct sunlight is supplied.

Regularity in Feeding Helps Prevent Ailments

Chickens are subject to two disturbances of the crop—crop bound and pendulous crop. Pendulous crop is usually due to inflammation of the digestive tract which causes distension of the crop with gas or liquid food. Crop bound is caused by an obstruction of the crop from eating long wilted grass, gorging on grain or a clogging of the lower opening of the crop. In either case it is important to clear the crop. This may be done in the crop-bound bird by making the bird swallow a dose of oil, and after working the crop gently to loosen the mass, suspend the bird by the feet—don't hold them tightly together—and removing the mass from the mouth. Several spoonfuls of warm water with a little soda in it will help. Keep the bird without food for a day, then feed sparingly on soft, easily digested foods or give raw eggs in milk. Regularity in feeding will help prevent crop-bound cases.

Weed Seeds in Scratch Feeds Is Cause of Loss

As a result of high percentages of weed seeds found in scratch feeds the Ohio department of agriculture is cautioning purchasers to watch carefully on the labels for the percentage noted. It is declared by the department that this type of feed loses much of its value when more than 5 per cent consists of weeds. One sample of scratch feed recently analyzed which did not contain the analysis as required by law was found to consist of 25.8 per cent weed seed. The law does not limit the amount of weed seed that may be contained in such feed.

Poultry Facts

Keep the poultry house clean and sanitary.

Keep on culling the flocks and marketing the nonproducers.

To hatch chicken eggs require 21 days, ducks, 28; turkeys, 26; geese, 30, and pigeons 18 days.

Don't wait until a week before the holidays to market poultry. Generally it pays to sell at least part of the flock early in the season.

Fresh eggs, properly preserved, may be kept from six to ten months and be almost as good for household use as fresh eggs. This is the reason preserving eggs has become so popular.

The number of eggs gathered during November, December and January is a measure of the poultryman's profit.

The number of eggs laid by next year's pullets depends greatly on the male birds selected. You can take your pick now.

One of the main things with young pullets is to keep them warm and dry. After they begin to "shoot the red," turkeys are the easiest of all fowls to raise.

Size of Picture

The size of a picture should be, in general, not more than one-third the wall space which is to be its background. Sometimes a painting or tapestry is hung over the entire wall space. But that is an exception to the general rule.

Giants Ahead In Third Inning

Frisch to Terry. No runs, one hit, no errors, 2 left.

New York—Kelly up. Foul tip, strike one. Ball one, inside. Strike two called. Foul. Ball two, inside. Ball three, low. Foul. Kelly fouled, to Miller.

Terry up. Ball one, inside. Terry out to Judge unassisted.

Wilson up. Strike one, swung. Ball one, inside. Wilson fouled to Judge.

Third Inning.
Washington—Johnson up. Johnson got a big hand as he came to bat. Strike one called. Johnson singled against the left field wall but was thrown out when he over ran first base, Wilson to Jackson to Terry.

McNeely up. Ball one low. Strike one called. McNeely beat out a bunt down the third base line.

Harris up. McNeely went to second on Harris' infield hit down first base line which bounded off Terry's leg.

Rice up. Foul strike one. Rice popped to Gowdy in front of the plate.

Goslin up. Goslin out Frisch to Terry.

No runs, 3 hits, no errors, 2 left. Johnson's single to start this inning which for a minute looked like a home run. It was a drive which cracked against the wall in left and bounded back into Wilson's hands. Johnson rounded first and

Methodists of Kingston Dist.

Kingston District Pastors and Laymen to Meet at Coxackie for Annual District Conference October 14.

On Tuesday morning, October 14, the sixty-two pastors in Kingston District, New York Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, together with three or four hundred of their official and other leading members will be wending their way to Coxackie where the annual district conference will convene for the day.

At 9:30 under the presidency of the Rev. George W. Grinton, D. D., District Superintendent.

The Rev. Earl N. Hubbard and the church at Coxackie of which he is pastor will be the hosts of the conference, which, next to the annual conference which meets each April, is the biggest official event in the life of the Methodist Churches.

With an unusual list of speakers, this conference in attractiveness is expected to surpass the District Field Day last month which drew about seven hundred people to Cairo.

Bishop William Burt, D. D., LL. D., of Clifton Springs, N. Y., until recently the much beloved bishop of the Buffalo area, and who holds a great record for executive leadership in Europe, is to be the leading speaker at the evening mass meeting.

The Rev. Fields Hermance, D. D., of Ossining, who began his ministry in New York Conference nearly fifty years ago, is to preach the conference sermon.

Charles W. Iglehart, D. D., of Tokyo, Japan, the Rev. Allan MacRostie, D. D., Educational Director of Methodism's Commission on Courses of Study, the Rev. Arthur Thompson of New York and Ralph E. Diefendorfer, newly elected to the Board of Foreign Missions, are also among the speakers. Miss Grace Duncan of New York is to be the soloist for the day.

CURRENT OFFERINGS AT THE THEATRES

At the Keeney Theatre this evening, "Lily of the Dust," starring Pola Negri will be screened. At the showings the first two days this picture pleased large audiences. For three days commencing Thursday, "Why Men Leave Home," will be the feature picture at this theatre.

At the Opera House tonight the Charles K. Champlin Company will present, "Just Married," a comedy sketch, covering a trip of seven days aboard an ocean liner. Tomorrow "Red Light Annuity" will be played.

At the Auditorium tonight Norma Talmadge in "Ashes of Vengeance." It is said that if 100,000,000 people could see Norma Talmadge in "Ashes of Vengeance," 100,000,000 hearts would cry out "There is no greater picture!"

Hoyt's Revue playing a return engagement at the Orpheum all this week are pleasing immensely. The play changes today, entitled, "Sitting Pretty." It is said to be one of the funniest yet produced and in which Lew Williams and George Rubens are seen at their best as fun makers. The last showing of "The Last Hour," with Milton Sills occurs Thursday, Friday and Saturday the picture presentation is Thomas Meighan in "The Confidence Man." It is a first run Paramount.

Dance at Polish Hall.

The fifth annual dance will be held Monday evening next by the Kosciuszko Fanfare band of the Immaculate Conception Church, at the Polish hall on Delaware avenue. Polish and English selections will be played.

P.T.A. Halloween Dance.

The Parent-Teacher Association of School No. 1 will give a masquerade dance Halloween night at School No. 1. Pretty costumes will be worn. Good music is assured and the cream and cake will be on sale.

Donates $5 to Salvation Army.

At a meeting Tuesday evening of Twelfth Street Hose, it was decided to contribute $5 to the Salvation Army.

Lithographed letterheads in lots of 12,500 at $1.75 per thousand, 25,000 at $1.25 per thousand complete. Write for prices on other work. GEO. MORRISON CO., 430 E. 53rd St., New York City.—Advertisement.

Womanless Wedding Solves

solo dance "Valse Brillante" given by Margaret Richards.

In the meantime other guests had been arriving. Lillian Gish (Sam Watts), Theda Bara (Thomas Rowland), May McAvoy (Charles Vogel), Leatrice Joy (James Davies), Pola Negri (Roby Stille), Colleen Moore (M. R. Coutant). They came right in from the theaters, through the auditorium, to the stage, so everybody had a good look at the notables, calling forth no end of hand-clapping.

Act III opened with a pretty and pleasing banjo and song number, "Going South," given by W. De Kowksi, Harry Connelly and Howard Kline, and was immediately followed by "O! Promise Me," sung fervently by The Giggling Girls (Anderson Carl and Harry Connelly.) It was "terribly touchin'."

Then Fehmer Chandler, "The Messenger Boy," gave an "Eccentric Dance," which was all that its name implied. It called for some amazingly lithe, agile and graceful action, of which Fehmer Chandler is a past master.

It was then getting so near to the time for the wedding that the guests were coming right along now. There was Priscilla Dean (Ernest Hicks), Mrs. Ben Tespan (Alfred W. Builey), Gilda Grey (C. R. Hall), Mae Murray (Dr. J. E. Reading) and Lois Wilson (Henry Nesselage).

The final chorus that everybody liked was "Humpty-Dumpty," sung by Harry Connelly and chorus composed of a group of tennis girls.

Things were getting exciting then, for the butler began to announce the bride party. First there were the blushing bridesmaids—anyway that was the way they were made to look—dressed in pastel shades of satin: F. S. Thompson, Arthur G. Carr, James Byrne, Harry G. Smith. They were quickly followed by the dear little flower girls, who came skipping in with their baskets of posies (and it should be mentioned that the bridesmaid and maid of honor carried armfuls of marigolds), just too cute for anything in their pink and blue frocks and bonnets. They were E. F. Flanagan, Dr. George S. Warren, William O'Reilly, Dr. George S. Warren, William O'Reilly, Dr. Charles R. Carter, F. P. Messinger and William Dugan. They were followed by the cunning little ring bearer—who the butler did announce exactly like "rain barrel"—carrying the "token" on a nice, plush pillow—Vincent A. Gorman.

Next to arrive was the maid of honor in orange colored crepe de chine—maybe—very stately, Dr. Mark O'Meara. She (or he) was followed by the imposing and awe-inspiring master of ceremonies (Arthur C. Connelly), and finally to the cheerful strains of the Dead March in Saul, the lengthy best man (Arthur J. Burns) having corralled the somewhat shrinking groom (Everett Fessenden), hustled him to his place before the master of ceremonies while the darling, sweet young bride (Alfred L. Harder) measuring at least six feet and possessed of a sonorous bass voice, gownned in white, wearing a long veil caught with orange blossoms and carrying a bride's bouquet, came leaning on papa's (Schuyler C. Schultz) arm to complete her capture of the groom. The ceremony was up-to-the-minute as performed by Mr. Connelly, and when the final basso-profundo response had been given by the lovely bride, to see and behold, the old maid had also rounded up the old bachelor, and if it hadn't been so late, who knows but there might have been a second Womanless Wedding right then and there.

Anyway, there will be a second one tonight and judging by the crowd in attendance last evening, the "Standing Room Only" sign will have to be hung out tonight.

Peculiarly American

The big circus is an American development essentially. There is nothing like it elsewhere in the world. The American business man has a genius for organization and it requires a super-genius to organize and conduct a big circus successfully.

But such an institution would not remain intact year after year if the owners had not mastered the intricate art of what the showman calls "moving the circus into the money." This recalls the cryptic remark of the able Charles Sparks:

"Any boob can run a circus. The trick is to know where to put it."—Earl Chapin May, in McClure's Magazine.

Rumania's New Lands

Rumanian Girl Coming From Market.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

Rumania has been made larger by additions of territory taken from neighbors in the past and is now in the somewhat unpleasant situation of having the unwilling contributors anxious to bring about a new deal. While Russia wants Bessarabia, which was a Muscovite province for a hundred years until the close of the World war, Bulgaria on the other side is said to be eyeing with desire Dobruja, a strip of territory which she formerly owned along the Black sea coast. These two "funk problems" are worrying the Rumanian rulers while in the heart of Old Rumania a near revolution is boiling.

Bessarabia has changed hands several times between Rumania and Russia and may well be called the Alsace-Lorraine of southeast Europe. An American observer set down without information in the prairie land might at first easily imagine himself in rural Indiana or Ohio.

Tasseled Indian corn, from seed brought from America, rustles in the breeze while ripples play over seas of yellow wheat. Earth black as Illinois "gumbo" lies beneath one's feet. When land like this brings from $200 to $400 an acre in the United States, it is clear why both Russia and Rumania, after five years' discussion punctuated with armed threats, still make counter claims to Bessarabia.

Geologically Bessarabia is allied to Russia, including as it does, the tail end of the black earth belt of Russian prairies. But even Russian census figures state that more than half Bessarabia's population is Rumanian.

In feudal days there arose in what now is Rumania, the house of Bessarab. One of the princes is said to have established Moldavia, which, with Wallachia, established by another prince of the same house, helped make up pre-war Rumania. Bessarabia takes its name from the family. This point of history is not forgotten in Rumania's "irridenta" program.

Russia's Claim to Bessarabia. Rumania, variously considered, is 1,600 years old, 65 years old, or 6 years old. Bessarabia was the extreme outpost of the Roman dominion, Dacia, which, in the time of Trajan comprised all of what now is Greater Rumania. Only Wallachia and Moldavia were included in the familiar Rumanian "boot" which made up the autonomous Rumania as first carved out of Turkey in Europe, in 1859. Independent Greater Rumania, 6 years old, was born when the Versailles treaty reallocated Transylvania and Bucovina; Bessarabia was annexed after repeated requests from the principality's peasant council, which first attempted to establish a republic.

Rumania's three ages are the key to the condition of Bessarabia, which has the air of being part of one of the oldest nations of Europe and yet bears the marks of the green pioneer stage of Nebraska in overland mail days. Like the American pioneer, the Bessarabian peasant is sufficient unto himself. He builds his own house from materials at hand, his fields supply wheat and corn, his stock supplies his meat and his flax the fiber which his wife and daughter spin, weave and dye. His private still brews corn whisky or "tsuica," a fragrant plum brandy. Only recently have auilune dyes replaced natural herb dyes for the brilliant peasant costumes. Independence is a prime virtue in a country which has only 530 miles of railroad and only 60 miles of improved highway.

The household obeys the pioneer rule that everybody works. From the child who drives the geese to the pond, to the patriarch who closes the gate after the oxen, each has his duties. Schools command scant attention where there is work for every hand and therefore only 40 per cent of Bessarabian men and only 5 per cent of the women are literate. The pioneer influence is further shown in Bucharest, capital of Rumania, where nearly every house has land around it, unlike the wall-to-wall style of many European capitals.

How Dobruja Was Acquired.

A striking contrast is semi-arid Dobruja, a "consolation prize" to Rumania—at Bulgaria's expense—on one occasion when Russia took a slice of Bessarabia. After Rumania gained a sort of independence from Turkey it was wholly cut off from the Black sea by the region known as the Dobruja. The only outlet was through one of the badly silted mouths of the Danube. The same Turko-Russian war that created Bulgaria and Serbia resulted in Dobruja's addition to Rumania. The latter looked upon the Dobruja, even with its sugar-coating of a port, as a bitter pill at first because of the loss of a slice of Bessarabia. The Dobruja was largely a region of bare foothills, steppes, sand dunes and lagoons, peopled with Tatars, Turks, Bulgarians and other non-Rumanians. Its one saving grace was its port, Constantza.

A railroad had been built under the Turks from Constantza to the Danube, which marked the old Rumanian boundary. There, however, the river and its broad bordering marshes seemed an impassable barrier. Not until 1855 was the great Cerno Voda bridge over the Danube opened. This huge structure, one of the greatest bridges in the world, with its several viaducts and approaches, is about 12 miles long. Its completion made Constantza really accessible for the first time and gave Rumania a usable salt water port. In the meantime many of the non-Rumanians had moved out of the Dobruja, the district had become somewhat Rumanized, and is now recognized as a real asset with which Rumania would not think of parting.

Even immediately after the exit of the Turks from Kustenje, as they called Constantza, the city was largely rebuilt, wide streets were provided and cleanliness and order replaced dirt and slovenliness.

Constantza a Great Port.

With its coming into its own as Rumania's chief seaport, Constantza has been built up along western lines. Large grain elevators were constructed to handle the country's wheat exports. A pipe line was run from the oil fields across the Cerno Voda bridge, huge petroleum tanks were built in Constantza, and the port became a sort of rival of Batum, oil export city of old Russia at the opposite end of the Black sea. Breakwaters and other harbor works were constructed and the port was made headquarters for a Rumanian naval flotilla. Little more than a hamlet in Turkish days, the city now has a population of between 30,000 and 50,000.

There has been a town on the site of Constantza for many centuries. At the beginning of the Christian era the town was Tomi; and there the Roman poet Ovid, banished by Augustus, died in exile in 17 A. D. Bulgaria's desire to get back her old Dobruja possession was used during the World war when German troops led Bulgarian forces into their old province. Through this move the Central powers cut Rumania off from the sea and brought about the destruction of the great Cerno Voda bridge. In case of a German victory Dobruja undoubtedly would have been restored permanently to Bulgaria. But when Germany was defeated the Bulgarians saw the coveted region again slip out of their grasp and back into the arms of Rumania. Since the World war the huge bridge and the petroleum pipe lines it carried have been restored, the damage that alien fleets and armies did to Constantza has been repaired, and the port is again functioning as Rumania's chief Black sea outlet.

Girl Scouts' Officers' Ass'n

Opening Fall Meeting Plans For Coming Year's Work—County Headquarters in Kingston—Girls Demonstrate Practical Side of Their Training.

The Girl Scouts Officers' Association holds their opening fall meeting Tuesday evening with a dinner at the Advance Restaurant. Mrs. G. E. Halliday of Wallkill, the Scout Commissioner of Ulster county, was present and gave many suggestions for the coming year. The good times as well as the practical side of camp were discussed, and beginning now preparations will be begun to make Camp Wendy bigger and better than ever.

Girls from troops represented by every captain present have been at camp and came home with glowing reports of it. The girls of the troops of High Falls and Krippebush have already been canning peaches and other fruit to contribute to Camp Wendy next summer. Within the next few days the Kingston Scouts will be found canning fruits and vegetables as their bit.

The association is soon to have its new county headquarters in Kingston. A new field director, full of pep, new ideas and the Scout spirit, has been engaged and the future of Scouting for girls is very promising. Miss Anne Roos, who has been with the Ulster county girls for the past two years, has been transferred to National Headquarters in New York city. Miss Roos has made many friends in Kingston and she will be greatly missed by every Girl Scout in the vicinity.

Owing to the inclement weather some of the older captains and lieutenants were not present, but the following members were on the job: Mrs. Carrie Barnhardt of High Falls, who has a troop of twenty girls; Miss Frances Muller of Krippebush, who has five; Miss Margaret Feeney of St. Mary's, who has about forty; Mrs. Isherwood of School No. 2, who has ten, and Mrs. Earl Haley of School No. 8, who has fifteen.

The next meeting, which will be held during the first week of November, is to be a picnic supper, held at High Falls.

TELEPHONE TRUCK BURNED WITH LOAD AT GLENERIE

On Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock while passing through Glenerie, the gas fuel pipe on a New York Telephone truck broke, allowing the gasoline to flow on the road and it was at once ignited by the engine. In an instant the machine which was loaded with a valuable load of electric supplies, was enveloped in a sheet of flame that compelled the driver to jump for his life and abandon the machine in the middle of the state road. The use of these fire extinguishers failed to put out the fire, and the South Side fire engine from Saugerties had to be sent for by the telephone company before the fire could be subdued. Traffic on the road was held up for two hours by the hot flames and the explosion of the heated cans of paint and the fire truck had to pump water on other automobiles so they could pass the burning truck which was with its load a total loss.

Game Birds Increase

As a result of continued activities on coyote control in the North Park country, Colorado, the number of sage hens was greatly increased during the summer of 1923, according to a report received by the biological survey, United States Department of Agriculture. On the inspection trip flocks ranging from twelve to sixty were seen, whereas three years ago these birds were exceedingly scarce. Quail are also on the increase in western Colorado. Hundreds of them are seen on the sheep ranges which have been cleared of coyotes.

House Peters

This popular man of the "movies" was born in Bristol, England, and educated all over the world. Such, at least, is Mr. Peters' own description of himself. He has lived at one time or another in Hong Kong and Peking, China; in Johannesburg, South Africa; Rio de Janeiro, Buenos Aires, Melbourne in Australia, Sydney in New Zealand, and latterly in Hollywood. Most of these places Mr. Peters visited in the course of his theatrical work before his entrance into filmdom. Peters is over six feet tall, married, and has two beautiful children.

Have You This Habit?

By Margaret Morison

HOMEMAKING.

WHEN young Sergel reached New York, an exile, became plain "mister," and sought to start his career anew, he found many houses open to him, not all of which he called homes. He was asked about a great deal; some places he looked forward to, and some he went to with an effort. The invariably cold dining room and the stiffly formal manners at Plantagenet Browne's seemed to Sergel, in the new language that he was mastering, "interior-decorated." At Colonel Miller's he needed no invitation, and he always found a merry company.

There was at Colonel Miller's a kind of unobtrusive elegance. Every one was at ease, and the poor relations fitted in as well as the daughters of the house. The flowers looked as if they had once grown in a garden, the chairs were all comfortable, and there was plenty of wood for the fire. Indeed, of all the houses that Sergel visited when he first came to the city, Colonel Miller's was the pleasantest.

Then the young man heard of the colonel's reverses of fortune and sudden death. Having known himself, the downs as well as the ups of life, he wondered what would happen to lovely Anne Miller and her little sister and their mother. With a good deal of difficulty he discovered their new address.

Then came an absence of several months from the city. When he returned, he heard of the tragic death of Anne Miller's little sister, and of the business failure that had involved what was left of the family income. Where Anne and her mother had moved, he was unable to discover. And as he searched, he knew how much he wanted to find them. At last through a friendly postman he was given a street and number of which he had never heard before. His clue led him directly away from the center of the city, and ended at a vacant lot in one corner of which stood a little wooden shack. Thinking to gain some information, Sergel approached. On either side of the crazy entrance steps grew ferns and geraniums. In the evening light he saw through the square-paned window the glow of a lamp. The door stood open, and as he looked in he noticed quickly the canaries in one corner of the room, and the books on the converted kitchen table. And then he saw Anne Miller in a blue gingham dress—Anne Miller, who, with her habit of making a home, had come to represent his idea of happiness.

Vessel's Weight Varies According to Direction

Attention was called recently in a scientific magazine to the difference in the weight and the displacement of a ship steaming east and one steaming west on account of the centrifugal force acting upon it. A specific example was cited of an American 1,000-ton destroyer traveling westward at 23 knots and adding 262.8 pounds to her weight, while the same craft speeding eastward would subtract 450.82 pounds from her weight.

The Engineer, London, has taken pains to look into the matter and gives us some additional facts. Inasmuch as a vessel running at 25 knots has a speed of 42 feet a second, and as the peripheral speed of the earth at the equator is 1,500 feet a second, it is clear that in steaming westward, with the two speeds opposing each other, the true linear velocity of the ship would be 1,518 feet a second, while on an eastward course it would be 1,402 feet. The centrifugal force exerted on a vessel of the aforesaid size and speed is 8,410 pounds on a westward course and 9,386 pounds on an eastward journey—indicating a difference of 976 pounds between the two conditions.—Compressed Air Magazine.

Circuit Blow in Fourth Pepped Up Senators and Sickened Giants—Sustained Ovation at Polo Grounds for Washington.

By Telegram to The Freeman.
New York, Oct. 8.—The dope bubbling today out of the Alamac Hotel, where the Washington Senators are hanging their bats during their stay in New York, was that just as soon as the team finished the series, Goose Goslin would take up the practice of medicine.

There was not a one of the Senators who was not from 15 to 20 years younger today, thanks to the Goose, although they were a lot of broken down old grandpas when they took the field for the fourth world series game.

Their "before taking" appearance changed after the third inning to a decidedly "after taking" air. The stuff they took that fixed them up was Dr. Goslin's home run in the third frame with two tenants on the bags. The prescription has done them so much good that they want another dose in the next two games.
Dr. Goslin cured McGraw's lame wing. The dope from the Alamac was that Bucky Harris had McGraw locked in a cage to prevent him from trying to pitch again today with the arm that everyone thought would flop sooner than the eighth inning yesterday.

The Senators limped out to start the game. Bucky Harris struck out the first batter. He crawled back to the dugout, not caring a whoop.
His team was just like he was. Then Dr. Goslin gave them a heaping bat-ful of home run and they pepped up as if equipped with a hod of glands each.

The Giants are writing no testimonials to Dr. Goslin however. He made them all sick.

The fourth game was a great one for medical men. Twenty-two city of New York ambulance surgeons,
all of whom like baseball very well,
were seated next to the two dugouts.
Whether they expected an epidemic of small pox, a flock of accidents or whether they just came to watch the game was not made clear.

The Polo Grounds fans would like to see Ernie Quigley calling balls and strikes behind the plate again.
They love his deep bassoon. Besides,
they want to learn what it is that Quigley roars when a foul tip goes into the stands. It sounds like a brave saying "It's a humdred sort of day, isn't it?" In Choctaw, being "Mmpf .... Whoo."

President Coolidge is expected to send a fact-finding commission here to investigate New York roofing methods and report back to the citizens of Washington with recommendations on how to root.
The capital, which thought it was giving the home team some first class, grade A plus roofing, can learn a lot from the 55,000 Polo Ground audience, who seem to care nothing whatever for the Giants.

When they get up and yell and shout and whistle for the Senators,
it makes the best of the Washington fans can do sound like "rotten."

Tagging Bases
In Fourth Game

By Telegram to The Freeman.
New York, Oct. 8.—"Let me see it," called Young to McGraw just as the latter was delivering the ball in the fifth. It came within inches of Young's head. "Thanks," quoth
Ross, as he picked himself up.
"Don't mention it," replied the always courteous McGraw.

Cobb and Ruth, the well known authors, sat within three feet of each other in the press box for upward of a half hour without exchanging a word. Final fuel for the forge at the rumor factory.

Fred Lindstrom, eighteen year old wonder of the Giants, started to race Harris back to second base after catching Rice's pop fly near the pitching box in the fifth. The gesture showed that Lindstrom still has some of the bush sticking out of his hair.

Goslin's attitude at the plate was all business before he socked Barnes for his homer in the third. The Goose seemed to realize that Virgil was not long for this life.

The throwing of Meusel and Wilson in this series has caused Gowdy considerable anguish. Meusel had the play right in front of him when McNeely headed for third behind Harris's single to left but Irish couldn't throw hard enough to break a pane of glass.

Wilson's contribution was a toss that chased Gowdy half way down to third when Goslin and Judge scored in the eighth. Hank had a baleful glare in his eye as he looked out toward center field.

McNeely was not altogether justified in his dash to third at that. The Senators were just arranging the details for Barnes' demise and an outfielder would have hurt. The young man reckoned on Meusel's scandalous arm, of course.

No home team, even the Phillies
when they were at their worst, ever faced the inimical attitude of home fans that the Giants get at the Polo Grounds. Some critics believe this to be the backwash of the Dolan-O'Connell scandal.

However, a more plausible guess is that the Senators are the most popular team in recent baseball history.
And New York is weary of chronic victory.

Mill made an atrocious fumble of Southworth's tip in the seventh and followed it up with a glistering stop on Lindstrom, forcing Southworth at second.

DOCTORS AND NURSES TO DINE ON ROAST DUCK

The doctors and nurses of the Kingston City Hospital will partake of a roast duck dinner Thursday evening at the Indian Valley Inn, Kerhonkson. There will also be an entertainment and dancing. Among the entertainers will be H. A. Eppes, known as "Healthy, the Milk Clown";
Mrs. Alma J. Morse, Dr. George F.
Chandler and others. Covers will be laid for 50. The trip will be made in autos which will leave the hospital at 6 o'clock, dinner to be served at 7:30 o'clock. P. C. Morse has assured the committee that a roast duck dinner will be served that will be remembered for a long time by reason of its excellence.

MASONIC AND O. E. S.

McGraw Facing
Pitching Problem

Both Managers Would Welcome Rain
Today, Causing Postponement of Fifth Series Tilt, and Putting up Much-Overworked Pitching Staff—
Nehf's Hand Is in Bad Condition.

(By Davis J. Walsh.)

By Telegram to The Freeman.
New York, Oct. 8.—With the easy facility of a quick change artist who disappears behind the back drop as William Jennings Bryan and returns in a moment as the late John L. Sullivan, the Washington Senators today had become fortune's favorites where yesterday they were fortune's fathhead.

They had Walter Johnson poised for another sortie against the Giants in the fifth game of the world series and Broadway odds were six to five that Washington would win and step out to the pace for the first time since the series opened. A victory today will give them the edge at three games to two.

Hence the John L. Sullivan aspect.
But it was not thus twenty-four hours ago when the Senators were one down and four to play with not the slightest indication that Mc-Graw would pitch winning ball or that Goslin would go on a hitting rampage. The William Jennings Bryan semblance was unmistakable at that time.

It has ever been maintained that John L. Sullivan had the punch.
That being the case, the quick change expert must think up a new character for them, pronto.

John McGraw is almost utterly devoid of pitchers and rain would be a great boon.

It looked for a time this morning
as though McGraw would be favored in this respect. It rained all night and part of the morning but at eight o'clock a pale, unenthusiastic sun peeped through the clouds.

The forecast called for cloudy and unsettled. John hoped the unsettled part of the program might be greatly exaggerated; enough so, as it were, to make the Johnstown flood look like a novice. His star left hand, Nehf, may not be able to face Johnson owing to a bruised pitching hand.

A postponement would not have been altogether unacceptable to the Senators, either. It would stake Walter Johnson to another day of rest and perhaps reach to the advantage of Peckinpaugh's strained tendon. Looking to the future, it also would bring McGraw into the equation as a possibility for pitching the seventh game, if such there is to be.

The injury to Nehf frankly had the Giants wincing this morning. He is the only Giant who has pitched winning ball during the series, and if he fails to respond to treatment, New York is likely to win second money, whether Peck returns to the game or not.

Nehf's hand was bruised in attempting to stop a hard drive in Saturday's game. It is swollen to the proportions of a young bologna and during yesterday's practice, Nehf was unable to throw a ball.

Jack Bentley, beaten in Sunday's game, will pitch if Nehf doesn't. He is not the most comforting bet in the world, but McGraw was pleased to admit nothing of the kind.

"Bentley pitched a pretty good game in Washington and I expect him to repeat," the great man avowed. "If he does, I think he will beat the Senators this time. We hit Johnson before and I don't see any reason why we shouldn't do it the second time he faces us."

Watson is another possibility but a most improbable one. He stopped the Senators in the ninth inning on Monday but one swallow doesn't make a summer nor one inning a half game. Watson, like Marberry, is almost certain to be held in reserve for the rescue of beleaguered comrades.

In the Senators' camp it was said that Johnson is absolutely ready.
They said the same thing on Saturday and the Giants knocked him upside down but history is not exactly pock marked with accounts of the same ball club doing that to Johnson twice in a row. In any case, the man who once threw the invisible ball happens to be a superior bet over Bentley.

and Albert Deyo motored out from Kingston on Sunday and called at the home of Miss Mary C. Van Wagenen.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Reformed Church held its regular monthly meeting on Thursday afternoon of the past week at the home of Miss Mary C. Van Wagenen. It was an ideal fall day and there were twenty-eight present at the meeting.
After a social hour or more, the business part of the meeting took place. Following this, refreshments were served consisting of cake and
tea. Mrs. Kate Wager of Kingston,
Mrs. Ernest Jansen, Mrs. Preston

Church and Miss Cynthia Van Wagenen served. Everyone present said they spent a most enjoyable afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Church of Kingston motored out to the place on a business trip on Thursday. Mrs. Church came into the Ladies' Aid meeting just for moment to greet her friends who were gathered at the meeting, all of whom were very glad to see her.

Mr. Craig, who was seriously ill in the City Hospital, was brought home
the past week.

The farmers of this vicinity are doing their fall plowing.

The rain the past Monday and Tuesday did much damage as it came down in such torrents, but the weather since seems to have been trying to make up for the damage
as we have days of ideal beauty.

The last boarders at Haplan's left for their city home the past week.
Mrs. Ed. Davis was in town on Saturday.

Many auto parties took advantage of the ideal weather and were enjoying the weather.

Mrs. Festus Yeaple has been spending some time with her mother, Mrs. Smith of The Grove, who was recently taken with a stroke of paralysis.

Mrs. Stanley Steen is confined to her home on account of illness.

Mrs. Kate Wager of Kingston motored the past Thursday to attend the Ladies' Aid meeting.

Mrs. Smith was employed at the Craig home on Saturday afternoon.

Miss Harriet Church of Long Island was home over the week end.
Mrs. Alta Brodhead of Waldewas home over the week end.

Miss Kathryn Krom of New Jersey was home over Sunday.

The Women's Missionary Conference will be held in the First Dutch Reformed Church of Kingston on Thursday of this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ten Hag of Rochester are visiting at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Christopher Ten Hag. They had the little daughter, Margaret, baptized in the Reformed Church on Sunday morning.

Why Does the Barber Strip His Razor?

Because he knows the value of a keen edge. He would never use a razor without stropping it.
Valet AutoStrip Razor
strops its own blades.
